

MET ÉIREANN'S SPECIALIST AGRICULTURAL SERVICE

Met Éireann's dedicated Agricultural Meteorology Unit is committed to providing the wider agricultural community with relevant meteorological information and services.

The Unit also provides weather-related advice and information on issues such as Blue Tongue Virus, Foot & Mouth Disease, Nematodirus, Liver Fluke and Forest Fire Risk to the public and various State bodies.

Met Éireann is closely associated with AGMET, a grouping of agricultural meteorology professionals whose aim is to promote and develop the use of meteorological inputs for planning and decision-making in agriculture. See www.agmet.ie for further details.

As part of Met Éireann's Research & Applications Division, the Agricultural Meteorology Unit is also engaged in research into the impacts of climate change on Irish agriculture.

The Unit is based at Met Éireann's headquarters at Glasnevin Hill, Dublin 9, and can be contacted by:
